purges including replacement of more than a third of the ruling Council of Ministers. The purges, most recently the suddeo replacement last night of the powerful minister of the interior, have taken place quietly during the last six months, their pace accelerating in recent weeks since the defection to the West of one of the leading members of the Romanian Security Service. Senior Western diplomats in Bucharest, bowever, believe that last-month's defection to the United States of Gen. Ion Pacepa was only a reaction to the most thorough bloodletting in the top ranks of the Romanian Communist Party when President Nicolae Ceausescu took control 13 years ago. Since March, the ministers of foreign affairs, finance, foreign trade, technical supply and fixed assets, tourism, and interior, as well as the minister in charge of the state planning commission, bave been fired and replaced, and two new first deputy premiers have been appointed. And 21 ambassadors have been recalled from abroad.

Purges Accelerate

Beyond this, scores of second-and third-echeloo officials have been sacked, and old-line loyal party cadres have been brought into the federal government from the provinces to replace them. Since Gen. Pacepa's defection, the purges have accelerated. Widespread interrogations are understood to be going on throughout the party and government, and as many as a dozen generals, members of the state security unit, Apparat, are believed to be in jail. A oumber of serious internal strains are believed to lie behind these shakeups. The ecocomy has continued to perform poorly, particularly in the important heavy-in-dustrial sectors. Last fall, strikes erupted in the key coal-mining dis-tricts of the Jiu Valley — strikes that the Ministry of Mines and the Apparat were unable to control.

Minister of Mines Constantin Babalau; Gen. Gheorghe Doicaru, FOR MO first deputy minister of the interior, and lon Stansescu, deputy prime minister and Communist Party Central Committee secretary in charge of security matters, were all replaced last December.

Since then, unrest has reportedly continued over the decision, announced two weeks earlier at the national Communist Party conference, to continue the emphasis on

YANBU, Saudi Arabia (WP) - A thick, salty hlanket of haze and 130-degree temperatures make the desert surrounding this 800-year-old town on the Red Sea a forbidding place.

In the days when Egypt's Moslem pilgrims were traveling to Medina and Mecca by boat, the merchants of Yanbu lived in oriental mansions of coral bricks with hand-carved Indonesian shutters and doors. Now the pilgrims fly to Jeddah, 220 miles south of here, and bulldozers are knocking down the coral bouses.

Local entrepreneurs were passed by after the Suez Canal was closed by war. Land values dropped to the equivalent of 70 cents a square meter. Today, those same Yanbu businessmen are bustling downtown plots for $700 a square meter. Saudi Arabia is building an industrial city in Yanbu. A patch of coastal land about 15 miles long and 4½ miles wide is being transformed.

Three seaports are to be built bere. One will deliver 1.6 million barrels of crude oil daily to a fleet of the world's largest ships for transport to Europe through either the Suez Canal or the Sumed pipe-lice in Egypt. Another will load freighters with refined petroleum products, propane, fertilizers, sul-furic acid and the myriad products of a giant petrochemical complex. A third will become a terminal for imports of food and other commodities for a metropolitan area of nearly 250,000 persons. The old town's population is now 21,000.

Yet Yanbu is only the lesser - for the moment — of two new energy cities in Saudi Arabia. Eight hundred miles to the east, on the Gulf, the Saudis are creating the city of Jubail. Because Jubail's desert landscape shields the world's largest known reserves of oil, the city will, for the rest of this century, have more factories, more exports and more people than Yanbu.

But Yanbu will play a vital role in Saudi til tomorrow.

Arabia's defense and economie security, because it will free the kingdom from dependence on the Gulf for all its oil exports. There are no known oil fields here. The 500,000 tons of steel pipe stacked outside of town will, in a few weeks, begin to form two 750-mile arteries across the Arabian peninsula one for crude oil, one for natural gas - that will give Saudi Arabia its first Red Sea outlet for petroeum exports.

But the geology maps of the Arabian Shields, the 5.000-foot mountain range that separates Yanbu from the Moslem holy city of Medina, are dotted with ore symbols: iron, gold, lead, sulfur, copper, chromium, mica. The Sandis are hoping Yanbu will become the heart of a mining area and carry the country's export economy into the next centu-

Other countries look at the Saudi oil reserves of 150 billion barrels as an enviable, almost endless, supply of energy and wealth. But Saudi Arabia is planning for the day about 80 years from now wheo oil will begin to run out.

'Planned From Scratch'

"Jubail and Yanbu will probably turn out to be the best two cities in the kingdom," said Hisham Nazer, Saudi Arabia's minister of planning, "because they are planned from scratch. We have taken into consideration every known and cooceivable idea in city planning . . . I doo't just mean that they will be major economic centers. Our estimate is that the quality of life — bouses, telecommunica-nions, schools — will be the best in the kingdom."

Mr. Nazer has toiled over the coocepts and plans for Jubail and Yanhu since Saudi Arabia an-oounced a policy of petrochemical industrializa-tion in 1973. Mr. Nazer felt that Yanbu could free his country of total dependence on an exhaustible source of wealth.

Saudi Arabia's 1975-1980 five-year plan carried an original price tag of $142 billion. The 1980-1985 five-year plan, much of it built around Jubail and Yanbu, will probably cost as much. The infrastructure work at Jubail and Yanbu - roads, ports, pipelines — will probably cost more than $40 billion. And the industrial plants will involve enormous sums.

Key to Success

The key to the success of both cities is a $14billion natural gas collection system under con-struction in the Eastern province. The system will eather 3.29 billion cubic feet of gas a day to provide energy for Jubail and Yanbu. Today the gas is burned as waste — flared — from the country's oil fields. The flared gas, according to Mr. Nazer, is worth $1.4 billion a year.

Construction of the natural gas pipeline linking Yanbu with the Eastern province is scheduled to start later this year.

Meanwhile, huge trucks will move across the Arabian peninsula in the oext few weeks carrying 80-foot lengths of the crude oil pipeline. The pipe, made in Japan, France and Italy, is being welded and baked with epoxy to protect it once it is buried beneath the desert.

Moored in the Red Sea is a vessel named the Yanbu. Built and manned by Japanese, it is a floating water desalination factory, capable of producing 500,000 gallons of drinking water daily.

About 1,000 construction workers live at the Yanbu industrial site, with more arriving all the time. Six hundred South Koreans are building a housing complex for construction workers that will have a population of 28,000 in 1984.

Crews will sooo arrive to begin work on an oil export terminal, four permanent desalination factories, an 11-berth cargo port, trash, sewage and industrial wastewater plants, and the oucleus of a new city that should have 75,000 residents in eight years. Other crews will build an airport and a telecommunications system linking Yanbu to the

BONN, Sept. 6 (WP) — The defection last month of a top-level Romanian intelligence official — willy Brandt, the chairman of normally a quiet coup for the West - has instead touched off a serious political battle in public bere and has added another touch of uncertainty to relations between the Uoited States and West Germany, a development that neither country

It has been a different situation in West Germany, even though spy stories are almost routine bere Leaks about the case to conservative, opposition-oriented newspapers bave succeeded in touching a nerve that still runs deep.

The differences spring from the alleged cast of characters, including a major and controversial figure in the left wing of Bonn's ruling Social Democratic Party; the timing just a few weeks before a crucial state election, and the political mood in both Bonn and Washington these days, in which leaders in disclose a lot of top-level Warsaw Pact intelligence to the CIA, which now has him under protection in an undisclosed location. Already, his revalations have caused a government crisis in Bonn.

Late last month, Mr. Ceausescu, in a message to the security service on its 30th anniversary, repeated four times the explicit oeed for it to be under "rigid party control." say that Mr. Pacepa did not in fact name specific individuals, a com-mon omission for those at the top

Such control is apparently very much needed if Mr. Ceausescu is to cut his losses from the Pacepa defectioo and the other shakeups within this and other ministries. Mr. Homostean, who has had oo apparent security experience, but who is a thoroughly trusted party cadre, can be expected to enforce such control.

All of these changes quite clearly have the personal stamp of Mr. Ceausescu, who has long believed that personnel changes are the answer for any operating or policy failure by his administration.

Officials Replaced

When reports began reaching him early this year of growing unhappiness over the state of the economy and the lack of food and consumer goods, he promptly re-placed a number of top officials in the state radio and television system and the government-cootrolled newspapers, particularly the party organ, Scomtaca.

The nervousness in Bucharest has become almost palpable. Clearly Mr. Ceausescu wants in place his most loyal people, particularly in the key ecocomic, security and propaganda areas, should any se-rious Soviet reaction materialize.

Nevertheless, there is also concern wbether all of these oew and often untried - individuals can step quickly into the offices filled for years by experienced bu-reaucrats and politicians. Obviously Mr. Ceausescu himself can supervise only a small part of the daily operation of the vast party and government bureaucracy.

Vietnam Premier Begins 5-Day Visit to Thailand

By Henry Kamm

BANGKOK, Sept. 6 (NYT) — Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong arrived here today on a fiveday official visit to a warm wel-come from Premier Kriangsak Chamanand and the thinly dis-guised coocern of Thai officials. The visit to Thailand, which Mr.

Dong will follow up shortly with visits to the other four members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, occurs at a time when China looks with intense suspicion for any sign of tipping the scales of neutrality of Asian countries in the conflict opposing Peking and Informed diplomats reported that Thailand, and its four partners in ASEAN — Indonesia, the Philippines, Malaysia and Singapore intend to resist as politely as their firm intentions allow an expected overture by Vietnam to link Hanoi in any manner possible to the grouping of Southeast Asia's noo-Communist states.

"China is the big one," a diplo-mat said, "and Vietnam is oot like-ly to make them forget it."

Last July, when a Thai delega-non visited Hanoi to prepare the ground for today's visit, for which Vietnam had requested an invita-tion, Vietnamese officials indicated strongly that Mr. Dong would like to conclude a treaty of friendship in Bangkok and, presumably, simi-lar treaties with the other four Thailand, unwilling to offend China, is not prepared to do so. It is likely to suggest, in turn, that the Vietnamese leader agree to the inclusion in the final communique following the visit of a phrase com-mitting both nations not to assist subversive activities in the other country.

More realistically, Thai officials hope to limit the results of the visit to a general communique restating traditional diplomatic themes andpossibly some steps toward activating trade. Vietnam, which has few products of interest to Thailand and even less foreign exchange.

In an incident that symbolized the hectic pace of diplomatic activity set off by the Chinese-Viet-namese conflict and its surprising aspects, Mr. Dong delivered an ap-parently carefully calculated snub to France on his arrival.

Hanoi, known to be angry at France for what it suspects is a policy tilt toward Peking, insisted that Foreign Minister Louis de Guirin gaud carry out a long-scheduled visit to Vietnam without further delay. During his visit to Paris last year, Mr. Dong invited the foreign minister and the visit had been scheduled for January. But when the Chinese-Vietnamese differences over Cambodia became evident, France postponed the visit.

gaud ended an official visit to Thailand and flew to Hanoi. His plane took off shortly after Mr. Dong and his hosts left the airport for the city. But the Vietnamese leader expressed no desire to meet even briefly with the French minister, which would have been a normal courtesy in view of the fact that he will oot see him in Hanoi.

The Communist and Socialist op-position charged that the planned higher taxes on consumer goods would hit wage carners the hardest. Gasoline, already at one of the highest rates in Europe, will increase by about 2 percent next year. Frenchmen already pay 2.6E francs for a liter of gasoline (about

Mr. Sadat termed it "the crucial crossroads" and said: "The chal-

Soviet Reaction

MOSCOW, Sept. 6 (AP) -The Soviet Union scoffed at the Camp David Mideast summit today, calling it "the Camp David trick."

The news agency Tass accused the United States of trying "to throw all of its weight" into bringing about a Middle East settlement that only would be advantageous to

Tass charged the United States with pursuing "selfish interests of a military character insuring a strengthening of U.S. control over the Middle East and its oil arteries"

Tass also charged that the sum-mit would be used by the Israeli leadership as a cover to joining the NATO military alliance. The 13member alliance, of which the United States is a member, is the Western equivalent of the Soviet-dominated Warsaw Pact.

Syrian President Hafez al-Assad said in Beirut that the summit might produce an agreement to end the war between Egypt and Israel, but it would have to be an agreement that met with Syrian approval.

In a speech to Syrian troops on the Golan Heights, Mr. Assad warned that Syria, Israel's militant neighbor, could "undermine any line of Middle Eastern policy it does not approve... although it might not be capable at this stage of imposing its own policy line."

Grand Jury Indicts Rep. Flood On Charges of Lying on Payoffs

By Charles Babcock

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (WP) Rep. Daniel Flood, D-Pa., the influential and flamboyant chairman of a key House Appropriations subcommittee, was indicted by a federal grand jury in Los Angeles yesterday on charges of lying about payoffs he allegedly received.

The three-count perjury indict-ment was the first formal charge to come out of a wide-ranging Justice Department investigation of Rep. Flood. He is to be arraigned in Los Angeles on Monday.

The inquiry gained momentum early this year after Stephen Elko.

Rep. Flood's former chief aide, was convicted of receiving bribes, and started cooperation with prosecutors. Elko is reported to have told investigators that Rep. Flood took more than $100,000 for political Investigations of those charges are continuing in several cities. In New York, Rabbi Leib Pinter pleaded guilty last May to giving Rep. Flood money oo at least five occasions between late 1974 and 1976 in exchange for help in ob-taining federal grants for his jobs program for the elderly. tends to offer Taiwan a new F-5 fighter more lethal than presentday versions but not long-ranged enough to threaten China, officials said yesterday.

An internal Pentagon memo coocedes that the proposed F-5 sale may draw protests from those who contend that it would violate President Carter's guidelines against de-veloping weapons expressly for a foreign government rather than limiting sales to arms already in the U.S. arsenal.

But the administration is expected to argue that this Northrop F-5G for Taiwan is really only an update of the existing fighter that has been sold around the world — an agrument that is likely to be challenged io Congress.

Other protests are already being sounded by Northrop's competitors in the aerospace industry, who contend that the sale of new fighter planes to Taiwan — which is expected to buy 60 of them — should appeared to buy 60 of them — should come after an open competition rather than through a deal engineered by the government with one

The Northrop F-5G is being described by backers of the sale to Taiwan as halfway between the present day F-5 and the F-16. "There's general agreement on this one," said an administration official yesterday in stating that leaders at the State Department, the Pentagon and the White House have recently agreed that the Northrop F-5G offers the best hope of satisfying Taiwan without alarming Peking. President Carter, sources said, has not formally approved the pro-posed F-5G sale to Taiwan.

The F-5G on Northrop drawing boards, which could be ready by 1984, has one big engine rather than the two smaller ones in the F-5s now flying. The extra power and other advantages stemming from the big engine would enable the F-5G to carry the U.S. Air Force Sparrow missiles as well as Sidewinder missiles now used on F-5Es. Both the Sparrow and Sidewinder are missiles to destroy other planes.

With this emphasis on air-to-air nbnt rather than on bombing, the F-5G can be portrayed by the Carter administration as a defensive weapon rather than an offensive weapon of concern to China.

Less clear is whether the F-5G would represent merely an update of the existing F-5E lighter or a "development or significant modi-fication" of an "advanced weapons system solely for export," which Mr. Carter bas promised to prohi-

The Pentagon went to Northrop to request a new version of its F-5 specifically for Taiwan, according to an Aug. 21 article in "Aviation Week & Space Technology" magazine Mei Gen Timothy Abern zine. Maj. Gen. Timothy Ahern, U.S. Air Force assistant deputy chief for research, told the maga zine that the Pentagon had asked cause of the offensive threat they would pose to China. Turned Down Kfir

Taiwan's first choice up to now has been the long-range F-4 fighter, which the administration does not want Taiwan to have.

The Taiwan government, which has received oil at cut rates from Saudi Arabia and thus would be sensitive to its anti-Israeli views, turned down Mr. Carter's sugge tion last month that it buy the Israeli-made Kfir, which is somewhere betwen the F-5 and the F-16 sale to Taiwan, The Taiwan government currently produces its own F-5Es under license. The sale of the new fighter would put additional pressure on Mr. Carter's effort to bold down foreign arms sales.

Another possible consequence of the F-5G sale would be pressure to sell the same plane to other goverments to recover Northrop's costs in tailoring today's F-5 to Taiwan's needs. One industry estimate is that of new investment has gone down it would take 300 to 500 sales of the considerably in the last two years F-5G to recover these development

Considering whether the means adopted were within the bounds of what is necessary, it noted that democracies are faced by highly sophisticated forms of espionage and by terrorism.

The state must be able, it said, to undertake secret surveillance of subversive elements in order effec-

But it warned that the 14 European states that accept its final rulings on the convention do not enjoy unlimited discretion in ordering surveillance.

Theft of U.S. Goods Said $1 Million a Year at GSA

By Ronald Kessler

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (WP)

- More than a million dollars worth of merchandise each year is being stolen by General Services Administratioo emloyees from warehouses that stock office equipment and furniture for the agency. according to a consultant's study.

The study of theft at GSA's 20 warehouses was made by Philip Baridon of Public Management Services Inc. in McLean, Va., for GSA's Federal Protective Services, which guards federal buildings. Mr. Baridon said that he was told by GSA employees whom he interviewed that GSA officials were aware of the theft problem.

"I think they feel powerless to do anything about it," Mr. Baridon said, "partly because of a lack of resources and partly because they had an idea it was protected by officials of GSA."

Undercover Agent

GSA sources said that the agency has been aware of theft at the warehouses and has asked the FBI at various times to investigate. GSA bas an ex-convict working as an undercover agent io a ware-house where thousands of dollars worth of merchandise has been carted off in trucks each week, ac-

"They've been stealing for years," the source said, "They use legitimate trucking firms and put the contraband on the trucks along with legitimate merchandise. They take something they want and drop it from the inventory. It's checked out by people involved, and they have people on the loading docks."

William Foote assistant GSA commissioner to charge of the warehouses, said that his figures show only a $146,000-a-year short-age from thefis or errors io inveotory records on the $800 million worth of merchandize that passes through the warehouses each year.

'Impossible' Profits

Mr. Bariuon's study team compared records of shipments into the warehouses with records of ship-ments out and estimated the total annual losses at $1.3 million, con-cluding that GSA's own estimates of losses were inadequate.

"We were told it takes God himself to declare a shortage a theft so they dump it [the shortage] in other categories in their records," Mr. Baridon said. At some warehouses, he said. GSA's records showed profits, which he said was "impos-sible."

Vienna, a city which often appears to visitors to be rather drab, is smartening itself up.

Palaces, museums, churches, theatres and the numerous large middle-class mansions - all witness to a dazzling past - have been given a new and sparkling facade. On the "Ring", the famous avenue encircling the Inner City, there is hardly a building left that has not now been given a face-lift.

he "Kärntner Straße", the "Bond Street" of Vienna, has been turned into a pedestrian area.

Why do we tell you all this? Vienna is currently going through the same process of transformation as some other European cities have already undergone.

Amsterdam, for example, London or Hamburg. Fresh colours, the many small shops, galleries, boutiques and restaurants all serve to rejuvenate daily life in the city.

ultural experiments, modern theatre. interesting exhibitions.

These are all signs symptomatic of a flourishing economy.

Not least owing to the importance of Vienna in trading with Eastern Europe, as a focal point and an international market place. And last not least owing to the strong position of the Austrian currency and the stability of the Austrian economy.

he "Erste", the major Austrian bank in the very heart of Vienna, has expanded its international business considerably over the past few years.

At the same time, our policy has been one of caution and security, and the proportion of foreign business as shown on our balance sheet for 1977 amounts to less than 10%.

The "Erste" will be glad to advise on all questions of export and import financing, for we have concentrated especially on financing operations which assist our own clients. As an example, medium term Euro-Credit transactions may be mentioned.

> The "Erste" is participating more strongly in "international underwriting," too. Since 1977 we are a member of SWIFT, and so international currency transactions in Austria are now executed in a matter of seconds: Through the "Erste".

So you see, quite a lot has taken place in Vienna during 1977. And as a successful banking institution we have been keeping pace with the increasing success of our flourishing city.

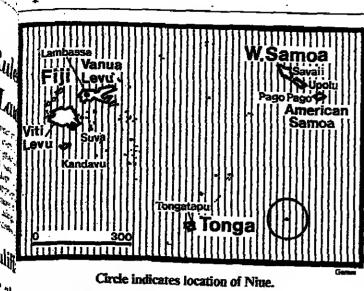

A visible sign is our new name.

We have abbreviated our long and unwieldy title "Die Erste österreichische Spar-Casse" to simply "Die Erste", the short form by which we have been familiarly known to our many business partners for many years. Mr. Peter Reichel would be happy to answer your enquiries. His extension is 368.

National Security Wiretaps

International Opinion

After more than three years of study, nego-tiation and compromise, a bill to bring under control the domestic wiretapping and eavesdropping operations of the United States' intelligence agencies has now reached the floor of the House of Representatives. The bill, as it now stands, has the support of both agencies and many of their most persistent critics. That kind of consensus seemed impossible to achieve a year ago. Now that it has been reached, the House should have no reluctance to pass this bill, which is much like one already approved by the Senate.

The Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, as it is called, would require the government, in most instances, to obtain a warrant from one of a select group of 11 federal judges before it began wiretapping or eavesdropping on American citizens in national security cases. In some situations, the government could not get such a warrant unless it met the same standards it now must meet to get similar warrants in ordinary criminal cases. In others, most notably those in which employees or agents of foreign governments are involved, the standards it would have to meet to get a warrant would be lower. In a few situations, primarily those involving direct communications between offices of foreign governments, the warrant procedure would not apply at all.

Those elassifications, which are spelled out in enormous detail in the legislation, are central to the consensus that has developed in support of the bill. The intelligence agencies believe that the bill would permit a suffi-ciently wide range of activities that it would not handicap the government's effort to obtain - secretly - the information it needs about the activities in the United States of foreign governments and their agents. Most critics of those agencies, like the ACLU, believe that the classifications provide the protection that American citizens deserve from unnecessary intrusions on their privacy by the government.

Unfortunately, an effort is under way in the House to gut this carefully worked-out compromise because of a fear that it limits too sharply the discretion of the intelligence agencies and because it gives federal judges a key role in some intelligence and counterin-telligence operations. Both objections seem to us to be insubstantial, given the alternative, which is to leave the ultimate decision on what kind of surveillance can be used against any citizen in the hands of the intelligence agencies or their politically chosen

The disclosure in recent years of the activities of the FBI demonstrates the danger of leaving such unbridled discretion in the executive branch. While some of the wiretaps, mail covers and burglaries that were undertaken against American citizens and organ-izations in the name of national security had legitimate goals, many clearly did not. Some were undertaken solely because a high official wanted to know about the personal life of a particular individual or because he was upset by a particular news story.

The proposed legislation would put a stop to abuses of that kind without hampering legitimate national security investigations. It would simply put an impartial arbitrator — in the person of a judge — between every citizen's privacy and the desire of the government to penetrate it. That would not be a new role for federal judges; they serve constantly as buffers between the government and the individual. But it would provide a new kind of protection that events of the recent past have shown is sorely needed.

This suspicion dovetails with another recurring theme of American history — interservice rivalry. This dovetailing is illustrated by the fact that the nnly senators on the Armed Services Committee who opposed the carrier were John Culver, D-Iowa, a McGovernite, and Barry Goldwater, (Maj. Gen., U.S. Air Force, ret.), who is nld and fierce enough to remember and continue the Air Force's rivalry with the Navy.

main strike force targeted against the Soviet Union. The Air Force wanted that mission and won it with the belp of President Truman's secretary of defense, Louis Johnson, who cut the Navy to seven carriers and provoked "the admirals' revolt."

Today, arguments couched in the language of national retrenchment and retreat will not persuade the public. It already is uneasy about the administration's opposition to development of the B-1 bomber and deployment of neutron weap-ons, and is convinced that interservice rivalry often injures the national interest. When she has found a house reasonably similar to the one she left behind, when she has mastered the language of the country in question, (including England), when she has her driver's licence and ber per-

Exceptional Years

As if this weren't bad enough, these vineyards are among the northernmost in Europe and really good years are infrequent. Both wintages but every year in between was a near catastrophe.

What keeps the determined Moselle growers going is a tradition reaching back at least as far as the Roman occupation and a growing postwar demand for their luscious, flowery wines.

After tending their all but inaceessible vines, the growers who do in m. not sell grapes or wine to cooperatives or big exporting firms, like Deinhard in Koblenz, go on to make and bottle their own wines. mostly for consumption within West Germany. خنجر <sub>ب</sub>ج. اند

The Moselle River itself is another essential ingredient in the quality of the wines. From Trier to Kob-lenz it flows in a general southwest to northest direction but at any given meander it can be flowing west before reversing itself to run straight east, due north or south.

Thus, no chilling winds can weep up and down the length of the river. The hroad expanse of the water also acts as a reflector of the sun's rays and belps to create a mild microclimate on a latitude with Newfoundland.

Another striking aspect of the Moselle is the universally high level of wine making. Everywhere you go, to a small grower in an area of little renown, to a big wine firm or

The vineyards of Kobern have no special reputation, but everything I tasted was very pleasant, whether from the very good 1976 vintage or

The Scarsdale Diet

Losing Weight Through Chemistry

By Naomi Barry

DARIS, Sept. 6 (IHT) — Now out of the West has come the Scarsdale Diet. The first copies. received from U.S. converts, are spreading through Europe.

Promises are promises, but an unimpeachable Manhattan source tail and seemingly slender — lost 7 pounds in 11 days, elaims never to have enjoyed a diet so much and is scheduling a second round. In New York the fasting period has become more socially acceptable since certain enterprising restaurants feature the diet as part of their regular menu

Devised by Dr. Herman Tarwer of the Scarsdale (N.Y.) Medical Group, the regime is based on chemical reactions between foods rather than relying on restricted quantities, which eventually force a-body to consume its own avoirdu-

The good things Dr. Tarnower lets you eat are supposed to maintain your normal energy level dur-ing the withdrawal period, which should never exceed 14 days at a stretch. The most bedazzling case history was 20 pounds dropped during a fortnight, but the patient had a lot to give up.

Dr. Tarnower specifies that all meat must be lean, all foods pre-pared without hutter, and all salads dressed only with lemon and vine gar. Coffee must be black tea plain. Sugar substitutes and diet drinks are permitted. Between-meal snacks are limited to raw carrots and celery and glasses of chicken blood. Substitutes will destroy the chemical balance. Alcohol is out.

SATURDAY — Lunch: fruit

SUNDAY - Lunch: bot or cold chicken, tomatoes, carrots, cooked cabbage or broccoli or cauliflower,

As a safety valve, Dr. Tarnower allows for an alternative meal which may be substituted for any or every lunch. It consists of 14 cup low-fat pot cheese, I the low-fat sour cream with sliced fruit, six walnuts or pecans and a diet drink. Those yearning to diminish fur-ther are advised to take off two or three weeks before resuming the Scarsdale Diet. During the coasting period, Dr. Tarnower allows two slices of protein toast daily but outlaws sugar, potatoes and pasta. Desserts are limited to fruit, diet gelatine or sherbet. Otherwise, eat anything, but reasonably.

During the interim period, the doctor permits alcohol, but only a measured 14 ounces a day.

The long-term capital account was nearly in balance in July, with a deficit of 28 million DM, compared to a deficit of 1.61 billion DM in June and a deficit of 840 million DM in July 1977.

Output Up

Meanwhile, the Economic Ministry reported the industrial produc-tion index rose a preliminary 3.4 percent in July from June and was up 6.2 percent from July 1977.

The seasonally adjusted index, base 1970 equals 100, was at 120 in July compared with an npward

Mr. Papon told a news conference that the combined GNP of France's major trading partners is expected to increase 3.3 percent next year, compared with 2.6 per-cent in 1978. GNP growth will increase in all major countries except the United States, where growth is expected to decline to 3 percent in 1979 from 3.6 percent this year, he

Next year's budget calls for a se ries of increases in direct and indi-rect taxes which will yield an addi-tional 6.9 billioo francs, but also certain reductions in the personal income tax of the lower-income groups which will cost the treasury 7.5 billion francs, he said.

Increased taxation will affect gasoline, heating oil, auto registra-tion fees, cigarettes, stamp duties and alcobol.

Subsidies to public utilities and nationalized industries will rise by 3.8 percent to 30,657 billion francs from 29,525 billion francs this year. The government's public debt will. increase by 37.8 percent next year to 19.863 billion francs from 14.412 billion francs in 1978.

While the budget fulfills the governments pledge not to increase personal income taxes, it has adusted the tax brackets for high-income groups, and has cut the ceiling by 50 percent to 25,000 francs of the tax concession granted to about 90 professional groups.

Mr. Papon said the budget was "active, sincere and just," and that the deficit was a "deliberate choice" of the government. "The government's objective, however, is for a gradual return to a balanced budget," he added.

The first reaction to the 1979 budget came from deputies of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's own Republican Party. The party's 14 deputies and members of the Finance Commission of the Na-tional Assembly said the governindex, from 114, boosts the rise in June from May to 2.6 percent compared with the 0.8-percent rise shown in preliminary figures. ment's policy was "worrying" and that next year's budget showed oo

New Futures Marts Gear Up in London

LONDON, Sept. 6 (AP-DJ) — New futures markets in white sugar and aluminum are expected to begin operations here oext month. They are the third and fourth new contracts to be launched in 1978 in London, and hopes are high that they will prove more successful than the revamped trading in coffee and wool that started earlier this year. The performance of the arabica coffee contract bas been especially disappointing, "It's just oot going," says Tim Lewin, research analyst with commodity brokers G. W.

A Trigger Price Urged For Steel From Europe

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 6 (UPI) — Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., has called on Treasury Secretary Mi-chael Blumenthal to implement a separate trigger price for European steelmakers, as well as the Japa-oese, in an effort to control continuing upsurges in imports.

Noting that steel imports jumped 31 percent from June to July, he said yesterday that he would write a letter to Mr. Blumenthal urging two trigger prices — one for Japan and another for Europe.

The trigger-price system, implemented in February m an attempt to control steel imports, sets minimum prices on the imports based on the costs of the most efficient foreign producer, the Japanese. Im-ports priced below the trigger prices are subject to anti-dumping

U.S. Imports Up

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (AP-DJ) — U.S. imports of specialty steel products during this year's second quarter rose from both the first quarter and the year-ago levels, the Commerce Department reported today.

About half the imports are from

Imports of specialty steel totaled primarily because of what many saw as excessive interference in trading by the U.S. Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Consequently, the aim of the Londoo Coffee Terminal Market Association was to create a market similar to that in New York, decominated in dollars and possessing a 15-metric-ton contract unit. Hitherto, trading had been in ster-ling and contracts were for 5 tons.

U.S. participation never materialized in any degree, however, and, says Joynson's Mr. Lewin, "as New York oow seems to have settled down, a lot of the impetus has gone."

And for the moment it's a similar story with wool. The London wool futures market was reopened in mid-July with trading contracts on crossbred wool, primarily from New Zealand. Previously, a merinn contract had been traded in Lon-

Daily turnover in crossbred wool contracts so far has been next to oothing. "The testing time will be when the wool huying season gets into full swing." says a source close in the Wool Terminal Market Association. Buying in New Zealand has now commenced and the next few weeks could see whether European merchants decide to do any sizable hedging operations in London. Meanwhile, London Metal Exchange and sugar market officials are hoping for a more encouraging and sustained response when they open markets early oext mooth in aluminum and white sugar future

The London Metal Exchange disclosed in late August that it planned to commence aluminum futures trading, and aluminum producers immediately complained that the new market wouldn't be in the good interests of the industry.

Specifically, some producers believe that the speculation inherent in futures markets could "destabilize" the industry's price structure, thus eroding their control over pric-ing. But Londoo Metal Exchange Chairman lan Foster says: "We don't wish in anyway to disrupt the producer-price structure." Some observers believe that alu-

The original idea behind the revamping of the market in January was that disillusioned participants in the New York arabica futures market would use London instead, num to be delivered against mature contracts, but over 90 percent of stocks come from producers who will probably not want to supply it to the London Metal Exchange. Supporters of trading in aluminum futures say the oew market will be a useful stock-financing medium, which could be especially significant if new production from the Arab world and elsewhere leads to a heavy worldwide oversupply.

Although the rules for the new white sugar market have still to be formally approved by market mem-bers, trading is almost certain to start Oct. 2.

Miller Urges Tax Delay, Write-Offs

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6 (UPI)

— Federal Reserve Board Chairman William Miller suggested to-day that newly increased Social Security tax rates be deferred one year and that husiness be allowed to depreciate its plant and equipment faster as a spur to investment.

Appearing before the Senate

nance Committee, which will begin drafting a tax-cut bill tomor-row, Mr. Miller said that a one-year delay in new Social Security tax rates would cut the inflation rate 17 percentage point and would give Congress time to find ways to make permanent reforms in the Social Security system.

He also suggested a tax cut of about $15 hillion, roughly the same size as the House-passed $16.3 billion tax-cut bill, and he said the proportioo of that cut going to husiness and individuals was about right in the House bill. About onefourth in the House bill would go to business, the rest to individuals.

The committee begins drafting its own version tonorrow, and is almost certain to expand the House-passed bill, which would grant a tax cut of $10.4 billion to individuals, $4 billion to business and a $1.9-hillion capital gains tax reduction.

Chairman Russell Long, D-La, and a majority of panel members particularly want larger capital gains tax breaks.

THIS ANNUANCEMENT APPEARS AS A MATTER OF RECORD DM.

IT SURE LOOKS DIFFERENT FROM THE INSIDE By Ron Nessen, Playboy Press. Illustrated, 367 pp. $12,95.

Reviewed by David Shaw

THERE are, perhaps, several things one ought never to say - or, at least, commit to writing:

-Fli love you forever. —You can't do this to me. —That's impossible.

-We'll always be friends. —I'll never lie to you. Jimmy Carter uttered the last line throughout his presidential campaign, and one senses that be's been spending much of the last two years trying to forget he ever said Ron Nessen also promised never to lie - to the White House press corps --- when he became press secretary to Gerald Ford after Richard Nixon's resignation in 1974. Nes-sen realized that any president following Nixon — and any presiden-tial press secretary following Ron Ziegler — would have to be thor-

the poisonous aftermath of Water-Thus, oo the day of his formal appointment, Nessen told the

oughly forthcoming with the press and the public if he were to escape

"I am a Ron, but oot a Ziegler I will never knowingly lie to the White House press corps. I will never knowingly mislead the White just accepted the press secretary's job. It hadn't been announced yet. Reporters asked him if he was going to be the new press secretary.

Nessen's response, he now writes:
"Not that I know of,' I lied."

Such disiogenuousoess mars Nessen's book throughout. He frequeotly boasts of his honesty: "I always tried to tell the truth, or at least oever to tell a lie. That wasn't an attitude I adopted when I became press secretary. It was an attitude instilled in me from childhood by a strict and moral mother." But Nessen seems to take an almost perverse delight in admitting he did, indeed, lie as press secretary about conversations and visits between Ford and Nixon, about correspondence between Nixon and then-President Thieu in Vietnam, eveo about so relatively trivial a matter as Ford playing in a golf tournament (". . . I tried to make it soudd like he was in Florida to attend a community leaders' conference. Actually, the conference was arranged as an excuse for him to play in the tournament.")
Similarly, Nessen frequently criticizes the press for its obsession with the sensational and the superficial. It's a valid criticism - especially in Washington. Drinking, drugs and sex scandals more easily engage the attention of the press corps than do problems of the economy, the environment or the State Department. But Nessen is guilty of pandering to the same taste for gossip. He writes frequently, for example, of Betty Ford's jealousy of any attractive women her husband paid attentioo to. And he passes aloog tantalizing tidbits about Henry Kissinger, Alexander Haig. Donald Rumslield and other White House insiders.

It's too had Nessen let himself be thus trapped. He was in a onique position to write about how it did look from the inside — to bring a journalist's perspective to one of the most significant transitional periods in American politics. Instead he first let himself be seduced by the power and partisanship of his patron, then let himself be seduced by the possibilities of the gossipy route to best-sellerdom. Nessen often admits his mistakes with a blunt and disarming candor, "Unforgivably, I went along with Kissinger's deception." he writes at

Nessen also offers a few personal glimpses of the Fords — as when one of the Ford dogs messes up the floor and Ford takes the rag from a White House steward and says. "No man should have to clean up after another man's dog."

Perhaps the best sections of the book are Nessen's generally valid criticisms of the press corps — not just its superficiality but its lazicess, its preoccupation with Nixon during the early days of the Ford administration, its exaggerated "sense of self-importance" and its frequent slovenly work habits.
Alas, these few insights and rumnations are largely obscured by Nessen's own shortcomings—both as press secretary and, now, as

David Shaw writes about the press for the Los Angeles Times and is the author of "Journalism Today: A Changing Press for a Changing

DENVER, Sept. 6 (UPI) — The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has a problem on its hands — 1,000 bottles of turtle oil in a warehouse and no idea what to do with it.

Mr. Stiles and Thomas Striegler, the assistant special agent of the there will division, said that customs agents scize any turtle oil brought back part Gels \ into the country by American tour | Mill Roll No.

Now there are 250 gallons of it, about 1,000 hottles, stored io a warehouse, but officials bave no idea about what to do with it.

South oow knew that the hands fit perfectly, since his diamond ace was opposite the indicated single-ton and all the high cards in the other suits would pull their weight. ## ——Section-by-Section Preview of the College Football Season

By William N. Wallace NEW YORK, Sept. 6 (NYT) - It is oot difficult to determine where the college football leaders will come from this seasoo. The regular season, which will run longer than ever this year, began last Friday — the earliest permissible date to play a game ac-cording to the National Collegiate Athletic Association — when Penn State defeated Temple in Philadelphia. This season will end oo Dec. 10 in Tokyo where Temple will play Boston College. So the Temple Owls will have a 14-week season.

After that comes the second season of bowl games, which has be-come so entrenched that oo headway is being made within the NCAA to set up a playoff system that would determine a true national champion among the 139 socalled major football powers.

Two controversial rules changes will be introduced this season: A pass receiver who has been knocked out of bounds by a defender can come hack into the playing field and catch the hall.

 After long-distance field goal attempts (defined as those from beyood the 20-yard lines) fail, the ball is returned in the line of scrimmage rather than the 20-yard line. The college rules committee and coaches felt that field goals had be-

Andorra Plans Celebration Of a 700th Anniversary

By Jeffrey Robinson

A NDORRA LA VELLA (IHT) — Andorra will be 700 years old Friday, hut even at 700 it only shows up on very large maps. It is stuck on top of the Pyrenees, fence-sitting between France and Spain. With 19I square miles, it is twice the size of Milwaukee. With a population of 18.000, it is half the size of Ames. Iowa is half the size of Ames, lowa.

For much of the last 700 years, life in Andorra has been slow enough to cure insom-nia. World War I only ended here in 1958 because no one had bothered to invite Andorra to the Treaty of Versailles. And for a few, those who live in the hills and tend their sheep, life is still slow.

What has happened to the others is called tourism. The Chamber of Commerce reports that Andorra these days plays host to more than a million tourists a year. That means nearly 3,000 people a day manage to find Andorra. . . which is a bit misleading because it takes for granted that Andorra can be found 365 days a year. It cannot.

There are no railroads and no airports. The 35 miles of roads might be good enough to get you there and back, except 700 years ago they built this place 1½ miles straight up in the air, and when it snows in Andorra it melts in June and is due to start again any

Bargains and Smuggling

The capital city is Andorra la Vella. It is wall-to-wall gift shops, money changers, restaurants and hotels. As there are no customs duties or sales taxes, there are hargains in everything and smuggling (between France and Spain) in everything-plus.

Even gas stations have a particular Andorra flavor. There is no gasoline tax, which means everyone beading back into France or Spain usually fills up. On the road from here to the French border, no fewer than nine gas stations have signs proclaiming, "Last Station Before the Frontier." Only when you take a closer look do you find the when you take a closer look do you find the small print; "With Two Restrooms," "With a Girl Attendant," "With an Owner Named Irving," that sort of thing.

Yet all of this might be understandable. . tourism is nothing unique to Andorra, However, there are two other problems: the Spanisb and the French. For 700 years no one here has ever been quite sure of what they are. The national currency is pesetas and francs. The national language is Spanish and French. There is a Spanish Correo, which is the legal post office. And there is a French PTT, which is also the legal post office. Children are sent to Spanish schools to learn French and French schools to study Spanish.

Andorra and an Andorran and his dog.

Politically, Andorra is neither truly independent, nor truly French, nor truly Spanish Charlemagne granted Andorra inde-pendence. The Emperor Charles II decided that he liked the country, so be made it Spanish. Henry IV liked it better, so he claimed it for France. The French revolutionary government of 1793 didn't like it at all, so they gave it back to Spain. Napoleon only liked it a little, so he decided the French and Spanish could share it. The anniversary which is being celebrated is that of the papal bull of 1278, which serves as the country's constitution.

The Half Princes

Today it is a sort of principality. . , the president of France is half of the prince of Andorra, the Spanish bisbop of Urgel is the other balf. down because of age. It made Andorrans wonder just who loved them. Then they began planning their 700th birthday party. The bisbop of Urgel said he would be delighted to attend. French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing said that he had other plans. Half a prince isn't as good as a whole one, so the General Council of the Principality of Andorra canceled the party in a huff. They felt that with 700 years' notice, balf-princes could have made themselves available.

Ohviously wishing to avoid a conflict with Andorra, Giscard immediately said that he would be delighted to visit his half-principality in the near future. The General Council then announced that the birthday cele-brations would happen when Giscard could make it. "It's only fair that he come here." an Andorra spokesman said. "It's not as if be's working as half-a-prince for nothing."

The French half of the prince receives. every two years, a salary of 960 francs. Somewhere around $225. The Spanisb half of the prince is paid 460 pesetas, Call it $6.25.
